The assignment and/or exchange of third parties for the performance of the contract (in particular sub-contractors of any type) requires the prior written approval of the Purchaser; which however, the Purchaser may not refuse without sound material reasons. One particular material reason would exist if there were sustainable indications that the third party did not have the required qualifications to fulfil the contract or for other reasons appeared unsuitable to carry out the tasks assigned to him. The Purchaser shall determine where the place for supplementary performance shall be – the place of destination or the place of acceptance – should it be prescribed by law or contractually agreed, or another place of introduction for the goods in so far as this was known to the Supplier when concluding the contract.

The Supplier shall be responsible for providing the necessary means for carrying out any supplementary performance. 15. Termination, Withdrawal

15.1 If the contract is one of continuing obligations, it may be terminated without notice for good reasons. An important reason is given if – the Supplier has violated his contractual obligations and in spite of a reasonable period stipulated by the Purchaser and threat of termination by the Purchaser, has not remedied the situation; or has been unsuccessfully warned by the Purchaser, or – the Supplier's financial circumstances have worsened so considerably that it becomes likely that the Supplier cannot fulfill, or cannot fulfill on schedule his contractual obligations, e.g. if the Supplier's credit ranking by recognised assessment agencies such as Moody's, Fitch etc. has deteriorated so significantly that the Purchaser can justifiably assume that the Supplier will not fulfill or will not fulfill on schedule his contractual obligations. Such a decline is particularly given if the creditworthiness index of the Supplier falls below the credit reform 499 or the rating by international agencies (Moody's, Fitch etc) drop to CCC (or its equivalent) or worse; or – further contractual performance is, or becomes, totally or in part inadmissible due to legal or official provisions.
